

KEPENTINGAN INDONESIA MENYEPAKATI PERJANJIAN TRADE FACILITATION AND PUBLIC STOCKHOLDING FOR FOOD SECURITY DALAM
KTM KE-9 WTO DI BALI TAHUN 2013

Abstrak

Public stockholding for Food Security is the content of the agricultural agreement contained in Bali Package. Public stockholding is a concept to meet the food security of the basic needs of people in a country. In the agricultural commodities trading at ministerial level conference / KTM 9th World Trade Organization / WTO in Bali on 6-8 December 2013 providing trading facilities in order to facilitate the pace of exports and imports. In developed countries like the US and European agriculture as a strategic sector that receive state subsidies is very high. In developed countries like the United States subsidize the agricultural sector reached US $ 100 billion/year, and the developed countries that are members of the European Union agricultural subsidies reached 80 euros/year.

Agricultural subsidies in Indonesia from 2009 to 2012 calculated the average reached Rp.23,0 trillion or grew about 22.4 percent annually. The high subsidies granted by developed countries, the products of agricultural commodities able to enter the domestic markets of developing countries such as Indonesia. Indonesian government's decision to conclude an agreement Trade Facilitation and Public stockholding For Food Security in KTM 9th WTO Bali, an opportunity to increase agricultural productivity in the country. Agricultural commodity exports to non-traditional markets such as South Africa on the agenda of the national government of Indonesia.