ABSTRACT

Tunisia faces its biggest democratic crisis on Monday, July 26 2021. It comes after President Kais Saied overthrew the government and froze parliamentary activities. President Kais Saied's move was seen by his political opponents as a dismissal that should be opposed. This study aims to find out the reasons behind the dismissal of the prime minister in Tunisia in 2021.

In this case the data collection technique is carried out by the author in writing with "Library Studies" or library research. Data processing and analysis techniques used are explanatory analysis techniques.

The results showed that the cause of the dismissal of the prime minister in Tunisia was due to the loss of legitimacy and trust of the Tunisian President towards his prime minister. The loss of legitimacy and trust was caused by the president's judgment that the prime minister was incapable and responsible for dealing with the coronavirus pandemic in Tunisia and the declining level of the economy, resulting in various crises.
