ABSTRACT

The development of the fashion industry in Indonesia continues to evolve over time. Thus, brands are demanded to continuously innovate and develop their brands towards betterment amidst the competition in this industry. Erigo is one of the local fashion brands favored by many Indonesians and utilizes social media as its marketing tool. In 2021 and 2022, Erigo participated in the renowned international fashion event, New York Fashion Week in America. This caused a stir in the social media sphere; news of Erigo's participation in New York Fashion Week spread widely on Instagram because Erigo was the first local fashion brand to participate in such a prestigious event. This research aims to determine the influence of the quality of information regarding Erigo's participation in New York Fashion Week on Erigo's Brand Image. This research uses the S-O-R (Stimulus Organism Response) theory connected with new media theory, agenda setting, and media effects. The sample in this study consisted of 100 respondents using Random Sampling technique with the criterion being followers of @erigostore on Instagram. The results show that there is an influence of the quality of information (X) on Erigo's Brand Image (Y) among erigostore followers. From the research results, the Sig. value obtained is $0.000 < \text{probability of } 0.05$, which means that the influence of the variable (X), namely the quality of information, significantly affects the variable (Y) because its significance value is 0.000. And the relationship between variables (X) and (Y), according to the results of correlation analysis, is stated to have a moderate and positive relationship with a correlation coefficient value of 0.590.
