ABSTRACT

This study examines community participation in the development of Pancoh Tourism Village, Girikerto, Turi District, Sleman Regency, Special Region of Yogyakarta. Pancoh Tourism Village was established in 2012 as a response to the impact of the 2010 eruption of Mount Merapi to restore the community's economy through the utilization of local natural and cultural potential. This study aims to (1) examine the activities in the development of Pancoh Girikerto Tourism Village, Turi District, Sleman Regency; (2) examine the dimensions of community participation in the development of Pancoh Girikerto Tourism Village, Turi District, Sleman Regency; and (3) examine the forms of community participation in the development of Pancoh Girikerto Tourism Village, Turi District, Sleman Regency. This study employs a qualitative approach using a case study method, focusing on the tourism village development activities implemented by the community of Pancoh Village. The research subjects were determined using purposive sampling techniques, involving the Chairman of the Tourism Village Development Group as the key informant, the village community as the primary informants, and active members as supporting informants. The research findings indicate that all members of the Pancoh Tourism Village community who participated in the tourism village program also participated in the development of the tourism village, both in terms of form and dimension.
