

INDONESIA AIR DEFENSE POLICY ON DEPLOYMENT MILITARY FOR BALANCE OF POWER IN SOUTHEAST ASIA IN 1998-2014

ABSTRACT

This thesis aims to analyze the policy of Indonesia's air defense in his air power to deal with the balance of power in Southeast Asia during the period 1998-2001. Through the analysis of various documents, books, journals and other sources, the authors argue that in the strength of the title policy is supported by the existence of the modernization of the main armament systems and tools of strategic industry development in support of the current technological development as well as the readiness of human resource development in the field of Defense the country. defense policy in an air force is to safeguard the sovereignty of Indonesia and boost air power bullying in Southeast Asia. This policy was important considering that countries in the Southeast Asian region potentially to threaten security and sovereignty Indonesia. A variety of offenses regions of the air by a plane foreign and an increase in the force of air in Southeast Asia make Indonesia still need to conduct a policy of minimum essential force in order to balance the force of air in the southeast Asian region so that the achievement of regional stability in the area of Southeastern Asia

Keyword:

Deterrence Effect, Minimum Essential Force, Air Power, Strategic Stability.